A cysteine conjugate of 2,4,6-trinitrotoluene (TNT) formed in the photo-catalytic reduction of 2-chloro-4,6-dinitrotoluene (2,4,6-CDNT) has been characterized by mass spectrometry and spectroscopic methods. Both molecular ions and a series of fragment ions from the tandem mass spectrum (MALDI/MS) were detected and corroborated a previously published NMR study by other workers. A proposed mechanism for the formation of the conjugate involves condensation of an amino thiol of a melanin enzyme with a nitro acid that is formed in the early stages of the photo-catalytic reaction.-dimensional, and hierarchical aggregation is achieved by the use of simple hard clustering, e.g., or hard K-means clustering. However, such types of approaches fail to automatically allocate a multiple of groupings to clusters. Instead, an actual or expected number of clusters must be known in advance, and the clustering is then performed manually. A general class of clustering techniques that are not limited to one type of clustering is called ensemble or “mixed” clustering, or multi-resolution clustering. A mixed clustering approach uses a random number of unsupervised clustering algorithms, where each clustering algorithm is run on the data, with the results of each run being combined to produce a final clustering result. The number of run is typically between 1 and 5, and any technique using the mixed clustering approach can be considered to be a mixed clustering approach. There are different methods for creating the ensemble, for example, the Multi-resolution Tree Clustering Approach for Undirected Data Sets. However
