A family-based association analysis of the 5-HT4B receptor gene (HTR4) in schizophrenia. The serotonin4B (5-HT4B) receptor is an intriguing candidate for involvement in schizophrenia given its localization to brain areas implicated in schizophrenia. Recent molecular genetic evidence has implicated a 5-HT4B receptor gene polymorphism, termed 1349C/G in the regulatory region, in the susceptibility to schizophrenia, but the association in families of probands and the role of 5-HT4B receptor expression in the pathophysiology of schizophrenia is unclear. We investigated the 5-HT4B receptor gene (HTR4) in a family-based association study using a combination of Sanger sequencing and the PCR-RFLP method. We found no evidence for an association between the 1349C/G polymorphism or other polymorphisms in HTR4 and schizophrenia, although we could not exclude the possibility of a modest association in the subgroups analyzed (i.e., white subjects, female probands). This is the first study that suggests no role for the 5-HT4B receptor in the pathophysiology of schizophrenia, and the results are consistent with previous negative findings. by hand, she could see his eyes. "I didn't even say anything. Just made my own way home. I live on Cherry Hill. I'm an only child. Lives with my dad." Aidan looked away. Maybe that was better. "How is your dad?" He shrugged. "He's okay. He's just... I don't know. A lot of things are changed now. He's not the same dad I remember. He works a lot. Sometimes I'm at the center half the time. So, sometimes there's no one to
