Wednesday, March 21, 2009 9th -10th grade Algebra I start the school year again today (Monday) with two Algebra teachers. I've noticed that the one that I was in in 8th grade always took a more student centered approach and that is what I want with the 9th-10th grade teacher as well. From my previous post... "Each student will be given a prompt to work on during their morning and afternoon study periods. The prompt will most likely be simple, but maybe worded slightly differently to demonstrate that there is more than one way to look at a problem. For example, a student might be given the prompt "Marry me?" and then they'll be given the two variables x and y to work with. After the morning, the student will be asked how many times x will have to be multiplied by y to equal 100. The student will not be told what the values of x or y will be (since they are supposed to figure that out themselves). The student will have to present the problem to the teacher to prove his/her conclusion (which will most likely be the solution to the problem). This should give students a chance to review and reinforce the basic concepts of addition, subtraction, multiplication, and division in addition to practicing the problem solving skills necessary to get to the problem solving part. The prompt is meant to be a fairly simple way to get students to understand how to approach problems without just being

We've added the ability to make Skype calls over VoIP, and we've made some improvements to the control of Skype from within the Widget itself. We've also now had people ask us if we were going to bring forward our major update so that it was accessible without the SDK. So, if you are stuck at a version below Marshmallow, you can now update to the newest version, and you will be able to make Skype calls via VoIP right from your home screen!
