Cancel |Cancel|Cancel|Cancel|Cancel. Exclamation. Generally, there is no time limit for this activity. However, in some rare cases, the timeline of an activity may have an end date and/or end time. A problem may arise if the end time is set for a future date. In this case, the activity may continue past the end time and you may not be notified of that date/time. If you are using a calendar, make sure that it is set to the correct date/time. For more information about setting dates and times, refer to the article about Calendar Settings. Although end dates do not apply to this activity, time spent for a task should be recorded in your time-tracking system. In this case, the time estimate is valid for the duration of the task. If the task's duration is longer than the expected time spent, you may want to extend the estimated duration of the task to be as close as possible to the actual time spent. If the task is a complex one, you may want to extend the estimated time spent of this task. The activity end date should be more than two weeks prior to the estimated end date. For example, if you are planning to finish this activity on February 24, 2020, you should complete the activity by the end of January 2020. If the end date is set on January 26, 2020, you should consider extending the estimated end date to January 29, 2020. If the activity is not complete as expected, contact your manager or your manager's manager (if you don't have a manager). For more information about your manager's responsibilities, refer to the article about Team Leaders. On the end date, the task is complete. If there is a deadline for this activity, an update must be sent to the global product owners, implementation teams, and stakeholders by the end of the project. On the end date, the task is complete. If there is a deadline for this activity, an update must be sent to the global product owners, implementation teams, and stakeholders by the end of the project. The distribution of tasks was calculated using a 0.5 lower limit, which indicates that a task can be assigned to the predefined team members of the organization. By default, an organization has 100 tasks. If you want to invite external teams to participate, add the task "external participation (up to %)" to the task
