How To Fix iOS Error 002: A Message From The Source: Your phone receives a signal from Apple, and the devices need a bootloader update. This update is a needed file that ensures the firmware is up to date and compatible with iOS. The bootloader update allows for iOS to be updated to a new version. During the update, the device can become stuck, which might cause you to be unable to get the phone to work, and might make the phone unstable. It's very difficult to fix, and to locate the location of the bootloader update is not an easy task. The bootloader update is located in a number of places depending on the version of iOS, but there are some general locations for where the files should be located.
